
The garden of Abdul Gasazi

Slightly Creepy Stories for Fall

The nights are growing chilly and the leaves are starting to turn. All of the apple and pumpkin books have been checked out at least once and soon the Halloween shelves will be bare. If you are looking for something slightly creepy to fit the season, you may have to dig a little deeper. We have two booklists to help you suss out books that will give you the shivers. Preschool and early elementary book lovers will enjoy selections from The Not-Too-Scary Stories booklist. Older readers who have a high tolerance for terror should look for the Horror display and booklist.

Read more »

Oh, the Thinks You Can Think Fiction The garden of Abdul Gasazi The stranger The widow's broom

Posted by Mary F. on Oct 6, 2011 Mary F.'s blog Add new comment

