

Books Plus Holiday Tea

As the weather turns cold and blustery and sunset comes earlier and earlier there's nothing better than to curl up with a good book.

Next Sunday, we'll have our annual holiday tea. Amal will bring her delicious cake and the Friends of the Library will provide lovely desserts and fruit as well as hot drinks. But the best ingredient is YOU!

Please come and share the titles of books that you have enjoyed this year and with your ideas for new Books Plus programs in 2012. We will also have lists of recommended books for 2011.

Please come and share some good cheer.

For more details of this and future programs, please see below.

Books Plus meets the first Sunday of each month. All are welcome. Join the discussion or simply come to listen.

2 p.m., First Sundays

January--Happy New Year!

No program.

February 5 - Your Blues Ain't Like Mine by Bebe Moore Campbell

Discussion led by Sarah Bowman

This book examines a murder of a young black man during the Civil Rights Era in Mississippi. Events of the murder and trial (by an all-white jury) affect everyone in the small town and change people forever.
