

The help

From Book to Best Picture

We are still a few weeks away from the Academy Awards, but the nominations were announced last week. Out of the nine best picture nominees, six are based on books. So while maybe watching the nominated movies is on your February list, it also proves an opportunity to add some new book titles as well. The six books include:

The Descendants by Kauai Hart Hemmings

"With beautiful and blunt prose, Hemmings explores the emotional terrain of grief, promising something far more fulfilling than paradise at its end." --San Francisco Chronicle

Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close by Jonathan Safran Foer

"Extremely Loud and Incredibly Close is a miracle, a daybreak, a man on the moon. It's so impeccably imagined, so courageously executed, so everlastingly moving and fine." --Baltimore Sun

The Help by Kathryn Stockett

"Lush, original, and poignant, Kathryn Stockett has written a wondrous novel. You will be swept away as they work, play, and love during a time when possibilities for women were few but their dreams of the future were limitless. A glorious read." --Adriana Trigiani, bestselling author of the

Big Stone Gap

The Invention of Hugo Cabret (Hugo) by Brian Selznick

"It's wonderful. Take that overused word literally: Hugo Cabret evokes wonder." -- New York Times Book Review

Moneyball by Michael Lewis

Ebullient, invigorating...provides plenty of action, both numerical and athletic, on the field and in the draft-day war room." -- Time

War Horse by Michael Morpurgo

"In effect, a horse's eye view of the First World War--heart-rending in Black Beauty tradition, anti-war like All Quiet on the Western Front is certainly unusual and dramatic." -- Kirkus

Posted by sbowman on February 6, 2012

Blogs:

For the Love of Reading

Information, Answers & Reviews

Reviews Subjects:

Award Winner

Reviews Titles:

Extremely loud & incredibly close

Moneyball : the art of winning an unfair game

The descendants : a novel

The help

The invention of Hugo Cabret : a novel in words and pictures

War horse

City of Bloomington Book Review and Discussion

As part of the City of Bloomington's Black History Month schedule of events, a review and discussion of Kathryn Stockett's The Help will be held on Saturday, February 12 at 1:00 p.m at Showers City Hall Council Chambers at 401 North Morton Street.

The Help by Kathryn Stockett details the lives of black maids in 60's Mississippi and the white women they work for. It chronicles the lives of three extraordinary women whose determination to start a movement of their own forever changes a town, and the way women - mothers, daughters, caregivers, friends - view one another.

If you would like more information on Black History Month~Bloomington Style: They Served With Honor, please contact the City of Bloomington Safe and Civil City program at safeandcivil [at] bloomington.in.gov.

Posted by sbowman on February 9, 2011

Blogs:

For the Love of Reading

Information, Answers & Reviews

Reviews Subjects:

African American

Book Clubs

Local Interest

Reviews Titles:

The help
