

"The Light-Bearer's Daughter" reviewed by Gina on January 8, 2008

view in catalog

Name:

Gina

Grade:

12

Title:

The Light-Bearer's Daughter

Author:

O.R. Melling

Genre:

fantasy

Write a review of the book, including plot points, if you wish:

Dana's father was taking her away from Ireland. To Canada, of all places! Until one day, in a forest near by, she met a Lady. A fairy queen, or an odd, homeless girl? Whoever she was, she wants Dana to undertake a task. In return, she would be granted her heart's desire. Dana decides to take the quest, and embarks on an adventure bigger then she ever imagined. A creature who follows in her footsteps, trying to kill her makes it all the more difficult. Full of Fairies, saints, magic, and lore. This isn't a normal fairytale, but rather one steeped in Celtic folktales, stories from the past. Set in modern Ireland, this is a gorgeous, haunting tale of a girl who steps forward to meet her destiny, whatever that may be.

Similar authors or titles?:

The Hunter's Moon, and The Summer King are a part of The Chronicles of Faerie, as is this book. All of these can be read alone, with little to no reference to past characters.

Would you recommend this book?:

I'd recommend this book to teens (or adults) who love fantasy, and/or Celtic folk and fairy tales.

Rate Your Read:

No votes yet

The Light-Bearer's daughter